The indication at Albany is that vindication will not come with this session of the Legislature.

Venue can guess on the weather with reasonable accuracy, but the senatorial question in New York confounds him.

Ex-Vice President Wheeler set a good example when he was in office, but Vice President Arthur does not seem to follow it.

It is 2,819 miles from Chicago to San Francisco, via the Atchafalaya, Topeka and Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific railway, and the time 137 hours. The fare is the same as the other route—$118.

The mines at Leadville are worked with a good deal of success. The total output for May, reached $1,356,068. A third more than the product for April, and much more than for any month in the history of the mines.

Charley Foster has been renominated for Governor of Ohio by the Republicans convention. He has a big bank account, is popular, energetic, a good canvasser, and will win at the election. He has all the qualities of a go-ahead, successful Ohio man.

The Minnesota agricultural society will have Professor John King, the aeronaut, for an advertising card this year. They will give him all the gas he wants and $1,200, and he proposes to start from the fair grounds on a voyage from that city to the Atlantic coast. The balloon will have a capacity of 100,000 cubic feet. This brings to mind the fate of poor Donaldson and Professor Wise.

The New York Tribune is somewhat unreasonable in its opposition to Mr. Conkling. It says that among the things which have passed beyond the region of possibility is the election of Mr. Conkling. It considers that there is as good a chance for Jeff. Davis to be President of the United States, and for Robert Ingersoll to be Archbishop of Canterbury, as there is for Mr. Conkling to be Republican Senator from New York. There is no hope whatever that he can be elected at this session, but should it be postponed till next winter, there is a possibility that he may be elected.

Only a few days ago one of the strongest temperance sermons ever delivered was that by a married woman at Cape Girardeau, Missouri. She went to a saloon where her husband was drinking, and set a covered dish on the table, saying, "I presume you are too busy to come home to dinner, and I have brought yours." With these words she departed. After she had left the room a general laugh was raised, her husband leading in the demonstrations of delight, when he invited his friends to join him in his dinner. On opening the dish he found nothing but a scrap of paper on which was written: "I hope you will enjoy your meal; it is the same we have at home." All the temperance lecturers in the country could not make a stronger appeal to one's manhood and reason.

The venerable Archbishop Henmi, of Milwaukee, is fast approaching dissolution. He has been confined to his room for more than a year, and an examination just made by expert physicians, shows that he is afflicted with softening of the brain. His death is a matter of but few days at most. The life of this venerable Catholic prelate has been an eventful one. He was born in Switzerland seventy-six years ago, and came to America when he was twenty-four years old. His ordination to the priesthood took place fifty-two years ago. Soon after he was stationed at Cincinnati as priest, also at Canton, and in 1834 was made Vicar-General of the See at Cincinnati. In 1844 he was made Bishop, and assigned to the Milwaukee Diocese. In May 1875 he was made Archbishop. His career has been wonderfully active, and the deeds he has wrought show that he is one of the most remarkable Catholic personages this country has produced.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE "STALWARTS."

Every utterance which President Garfield has made on the subject of Robertson's appointment shows that he will not entertain any hostility toward Mr. Conkling, or any Republicans who are friends of Mr. Conkling, and opposed to the policy of the administration. He has no quarrel with any of them and will not make one if it is within his power to prevent it. What the President desires and that which he is now working for, is harmony in the Republican party so that its strength can be utilized when a common enemy is to be met. There is not enough combativeness in President Garfield to make war on any faction of the party. He is more for compromise than for war when the differences to be settled are within the ranks of the Republican party. That is one reason why the President has suggested that the Republicans at Albany should consolidate their votes, and stop firing at random. Like any other true and unselfish Republican, he wants the party made stronger, he wants difficulties buried and factions broken up, and the contest in New York put to a speedy end by the election of two good Republicans; and should these Republicans happen to be Roscoe Conkling and Thomas C. Platt, he would say amen to the voice of the New York Legislature.

When the inside history of the nomination of Robertson is thoroughly understood, President Garfield will be exonerated from much of the blame which the so-called "Stalwarts" have thrown upon him. That he did not treat Mr. Conkling fairly, that he broke faith with Postmaster General James and others, and that he blundered in renewing the custom house fight when the country wanted nothing of it, will probably be taken for granted. But his motives were not bad. He did not purposely break with Mr. Conkling, nor did he give the nomination to Robertson simply and purely as a reward for the work he did for the President at Chicago. He has always talked fairly about the trouble between himself and ex-Senator Conkling, and the letter which it is said he recently wrote to a friend in New York, goes to show that he will not knowingly say one word and do a single act which will tend to create a division in the party in New York and keep open the breach, which now exists between the Conkling and the administration men. He considers Conkling and Platt good Republicans, and would rather see them returned to the Senate than two others of much less ability and doubtful Republicanism.

AN INJURED WIFE'S REDRESS.

For several years Mr. Henry A. Elkins, of Chicago, has occupied a foremost position among the artists of the West. Some of his landscapes in oil were equal to the best productions of the kind coming from American artists. He worked rapidly with his brush, selected popular subjects for his pictures, showed considerable business tact in disposing of them, and by these means could easily earn ten thousand a year.

Eleven years ago Elkins married a daughter of Mr. L. J. Cobb, of Chicago. They lived happily together till within the last three or four years. In 1876 Elkins began to drink and as a matter of course neglected his business. Since 1879 he has done little else than drink. He has abandoned his family, laid down his brush, has been taken to the home for the cure of inebriates, but no sooner would he be set at liberty than he would find his way to some saloon and indulge in a drunk which would last for several days. It is said that a saloon-keeper in Chicago, named Cudney is in a great measure responsible for Elkins' fall. He enticed him into his saloon, would make him drunk, and at last would get possession of some of his pictures. In this way he secured some $15,000 worth of Elkins' work.

It is probably a question whether the saloon-keeper is legally responsible for the fall of Mr. Elkins, and whether his wife can recover damages from Cudney for selling her husband liquor in spite of her repeated warnings not to do so. As a test case, however, Mrs. Elkins has brought suit against the saloon-keeper for seducing Elkins into drinking to the destruction of his business and the ruin of his family, and asks for $25,000 damages. The case began in the Superior Court on Tuesday, and the proceedings will be watched with the deepest interest. It would be a good thing for law and order and for peace and justice, if Mrs. Elkins could obtain a substantial judgment of from $15,000 to $25,000. Many a home has been broken up by whisky, furnished by men who knew they were working destruction to the families of the drinkers when they sold the liquor. Such men should be made to suffer severely for their crime, and an example should be set by the Superior Court of Chicago.

A MODEL INSTITUTION.

The State board of control, which has assumed the management of the charitable and penal institutions of the State, paid the institution for the education of the blind in this city, a visit on Wednesday. It was a good thing for the board and a good thing for the institution, that the visit was made, and the management of that important educational institution carefully examined. The Gazette has always maintained that among all the charitable institutions in Wisconsin, there was not one managed with more skill, care and economy, than that for the education of the blind. Such an institution as this, will stand all the investigation that could possibly be made, and would come out stronger than ever.

It is probably needless to say that the board found everything at the institution in a very satisfactory condition. Each member of the board was interviewed as to his opinion of its management and condition, and each agreed that it could not be improved. No changes were made; no suggestions were offered that any should be made. The board very wisely continued the management of the institution in the hands of Mrs. Little, who, for several years, has been the superintendent. She is a woman of excellent executive abilities, never tires of her duties, is a thorough educator, and is energetic and progressive. The board was well satisfied from a single glance at the workings of the institution, that the best thing they could do was to let its management remain in the hands of Mrs. Little. For that responsible task she is incomparable from whatever point of view the case may be taken into account. The Institution for the education of the blind is a model one, and its management does great credit to the superintendent and is fortunate for the State.

If the State board of control meets with no more difficulties in its rounds than it met with in Janesville, it will be remarkably free from trouble, and the institutions will be found in first class condition.

AT ALBANY.

Special to the Gazette.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 9.—In the assembly to-day Bradley, Sharpe, and Armstrong made statements that they had been offered money to vote against Conkling. A committee of investigation was appointed. A motion for a final adjournment Saturday was tabled. The vote on Conkling's successor stood: Jacobs, 49; Conkling, 34; Wheeler, 23; Cornell, 16; Rogers, 14; scattering, 17.

CELEBRATING.

Special to the Gazette.

VIENNA, June 9.—The railway officials are celebrating George Stephenson's centennial birthday.

UNDER CONTROL.

Special to the Gazette.

QUEBEC, June 9.—The great fire here is under control now. Seven hundred houses are destroyed, and nearly 3,000 families rendered homeless. The loss will reach over $500,000. The large St. John's church is in ruins. It was valued at $100,000. The scenes of the great Chicago fire are reenacted.

A BIG BLAZE.

A Disastrous Fire in Quebec—The Fire Brigade Demoralized.

QUEBEC, June 9.—One of those destructive fires to which Quebec is so subject, broke out at 11 p. m., in the midst of St. John's suburbs, midway between St. Roch's and the upper town. The fire originated in a small wooden house in Oliver street, and directly it spread to adjoining buildings and assumed great proportions. The fire brigade became demoralized and lost all control of themselves and the fire. At 2 o'clock this morning, St. John's church (Roman Catholic) the largest in the city, worth $100,000, is burning. Six hundred buildings are destroyed, some of brick and stone and some of wood. The loss so far must be over $750,000, with one thousand families homeless. The fire is still spreading. No loss of life is reported yet, though several people are missing. The houseless are camped out in fields surrounding the city. There was made off with most of the property saved from the flames, and the fire overtook nearly all the remaining movables. Half the people in town block the streets, and the firemen are impeded. Panic prevails everywhere. The burning sparks and shingles are falling all over the city, and its total destruction is by no means improbable.

NEW TACTICS.

The New Tactics of the Star Route Thieves.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The member of the star route ring have resorted to new tactics recently to create a sentiment against the government's prosecution. Letters have been addressed to many prominent men in different parts of the country who had at one time recommended the establishment of star routes saying that they were included among the persons the attorney general and postmaster general were hounding down, and that they would almost certainly be indicted. In one or two instances the rogues went so far as to tell certain gentlemen that indictments had been found against them. The object of this false information was to work upon the President through the agency of these individuals, whom the contractors sought to alarm. The attempt has proven an utter failure. The President is not to be deterred from his duty by any misrepresentations and or sentimental considerations. The postmaster general is not running a drag-net through the departments, seeking to implicate every person who has been on speaking terms with the conspirators. It is possible to bring to justice the ringleaders in the great frauds by which the government has been robbed of millions of dollars it will be done. The small fry will not be attended to until after the big fish are extinguished. The attempt of the ring to answer the charges brought against its members by defaming and abusing every person connected with the prosecution is a useless waste of time. The grand jury will do all parties concerned ample justice.

STATE CAPITAL NOTES.

MADISON, June 8.—L. C. Stanley and S. B. Strong, of Chippewa Falls, and V. W. Boyles, of Eau Claire, filed articles in the State department to-day for the incorporation of the Anchor consolidated gold and silver mining company, with a capital stock of $2,000,000. Their purpose is to buy and develop mines and to mill, smelt and reduce to bullion the extract thereof, especially in the Tombstone mining district, Arizona territory.

Articles of the Fond du Lac electric lighting and power company, an association formed for lighting Fond du Lac city with electric light, were also filed to-day. Rudolph Ebert, H. H. Dodd, H. Kutobu, and Louis Nerter are the incorporators, with $10,000 capital.

An old railroad mortgage was discharged of record by the Secretary of State to-day. The mortgage was given by the La Crosse, Prescott and Trempealeau railroad company, a corporation long since defunct, whose lines are now owned by the Chicago and Northwestern railway, which was executed in New York city, May 19, and is signed by Samuel J. Tilden, the Gramercy Park resident.

There is a lively contest over the St. Croix railroad land-grant agency, an office worth $5,000 a year, made vacant by the appointment of H. A. Taylor as consul to Marseilles. George Ginty, of the Chippewa Herald; Assemblyman Merton Herriek, of Hudson, and ex-Senator Bailey, of Baldwin, St. Croix county, are the leading aspirants.

STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE.

ROCKFORD, Ill., June 8.—J. W. Roderick, an employee of the co-operative furniture factory, went to the circus yesterday, since which time he has not been seen by any of his friends. He was married, and lived in Woodruff's addition. This morning his wife called at the factory and collected the money due him, and stated that he had not been seen since he left to attend the circus. Efforts to find some trace of him have been unavailing, and his friends regard his disappearance as very mysterious, to say the least, and fears as to his safety are entertained. Some think that he may have obtained work as a laborer with the circus and gone off with it.

STATE MEDICAL SOCIETY.

MILWAUKEE, June 8.—The second day's meeting of the Wisconsin State medical society was devoted to the presentation of the reports of the several standing committees. The most interesting of those which came under consideration was that submitted by Dr. Senn, of Milwaukee, chairman of the committee on surgery. This was listened to with profound attention, and led to an interesting debate on the merits of the antiseptic system of surgery. Many resident practitioners who are debared from practice under the new law applied to be admitted as members of the State association. After considerable debate it was finally decided by ballot to admit them, the vote cast being 31 yeas to 11 nays. After electing officers for the next term the society adjourned till tomorrow morning at 8:30. The new officers are Dr. Meagher, President; Drs. Lunde and Day, Vice-Presidents; Dr. Reeves, Secretary; and Drs. Senn, Marks and Dodge, finance committee.

SUICIDAL.

APPLETON, June 8.—John Morris, a well-to-do young man, of this city, employed by Badner, Smith & Co., pulp manufacturers, committed suicide at his boarding-house this morning, at 8 o'clock, by shooting himself in the mouth, the ball, 38-caliber, passing upwards through the brain, lodging in the scalp, causing instant death. The cause, it is said, is melancholy. The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock to-morrow, under the auspices of the Odd Fellows of which society he was a member.

WISCONSIN ODD FELLOWS.

MILWAUKEE, June 8.—The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows elected officers as follows to-day: Charles L. Deering, Portage, Master; Van S. Bennett, Rockton, D. M.; J. W. Hudson, Madison, W.; L. B. Hills, Madison, S.; David Adler, Milwaukee, T.; J. G. Clark, Lancaster, Rep.; A. Willard, Beaver Dam, Trustee. The day was spent in matters routine character, and to-morrow points of policy will be considered. The following distinguished Odd Fellows of Illinois attended the session to-day: J. Ward Ellis, P. G. R.; A. F. Thomas, P. G. M.; W. H. Crocker, G. P.; A. G. Lull, P. G. M.; John P. Foss, P. G. M.; A. Ellwood, D. G. M.; W. W. Lowdermilk, P. G. R. At noon the grand lodge visited the chamber of commerce. There were about 800 members present.

A SLIP.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—A curious and interesting fact has just become known here. A short time before the Chicago convention, General Badeau arrived in New York from London with the stereotypic plates of a campaign life of General Grant which had been prepared abroad, in anticipation of nomination at Chicago. The plan was to put the work to press immediately upon receiving news that General Grant was nominated. The duty was paid on the plates, and they were taken away. When the result of the convention became known, General Badeau brought them back and made application for a permit to re-export the plates and receive the duty he had paid. This request could not be granted, since the duty had been paid on them and they had been removed. But for the entire confidence in General Grant's nomination, the plates could have been left in bond, and if no occasion for their use had arisen, they could then have been entered for export. Their prompt removal was probably for the purpose of arranging them on the press for immediate publication.

PROMISES FULFILLED.

ALBANY, June 8.—All the predictions made by the administration men last night were fulfilled to-day. Depew received over fifty votes, Conkling and Platt were deserted by one of their most prominent supporters, and neither received a single addition to his force. These results have excited a high degree of enthusiasm on the administration side, while the Bucks are correspondingly despondent. They are also getting desperate, and are ready to go to any length to prevent the triumph of their opponents. The desertion of Assemblyman C. H. Russell is the most severe blow the Conklingites have received. The force of the loss is increased by the public and deliberate manner in which he announced his change of position. When his name was called in the joint convention, he arose and asked to be excused from voting, making the following explanation: "On each day when I have been present since this joint convention met, I have voted for the return of the late distinguished Senators. They were my choice, and my preference has led me to give them my support. Without desiring to make any distinction between the two gentlemen, I regarded Mr. Conkling as the ideal Senator. I have, however, just returned from my constituents, and am convinced by such evidence as should satisfy any fair-minded person that nine-tenths of the Republicans there are opposed to the return of the late Senators. I have a duty to perform to the Republicans who sent me here, and that is to give voice to their sentiments, and I, therefore, vote for Mr. Cornell." Mr. Russell, who is a Brooklyn lawyer of considerable ability, is chairman of the important committee on insurance, and is recognized as one of the most intelligent and respectable adherents of Conkling and Platt had. It is believed that his action will have much weight with the other thinking members of the Buck faction.

A BIG SARATOGA.

The Story of the Trunk Which the Baggage-Smasher Respects.

A big Saratoga was found shunted on a track at the union depot, and as it struck one of the metallic corner-pieces flew across while the artistic smasher grinned his satisfaction. The circumstance was not a notable one, save as it suggested to Mr. E. P. McCarthy, who was waiting the departure of a train, the adventures of a friend of his. The gentleman was a great traveler, and after observing the habits of the baggage smasher in various countries he had constructed a trunk of a particular pattern. It was as near the shape of an egg as the maker could frame it, and it was covered with sole leather. After one encounter with this trunk the smasher always treated it with respect. If it was tossed carelessly on the truck or the floor of the car and other baggage piled upon it, the first jar would bring down the heap. In time the eccentricities of the peculiar piece were duly recognized, and no matter what the haste or confusion, it traveled safely on its shape, always on top, no matter how high the mountain of baggage was built. The egg-shaped trunk has already outlived scores of zinc-covered, metal-ribbed and corner-protected boxes and still it is on the road, good for the owner's life-time.

THE HUMAN HAIR.

How to Preserve and Beautify It.
Many persons abuse this delicate and beautiful ornament by burning it with alcoholic washes and plastering it with grease, which has no affinity for the skin, and is not absorbed. BURNETT'S COCAINE, a compound of Cocaine Oil, etc., is unrivaled as a dressing for the hair—it is readily absorbed, and is peculiarly adapted to its various conditions, preventing its falling off and promoting its healthy growth.

Housekeepers should insist upon obtaining BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS, for they are the best.

THE STOPPING OF THE CLOCK.

Surprising falls the instantaneous calm.
The sudden silence in my chamber small;
I, starting, lift my head in half alarm—
The clock has stopped—That's all.

The clock has stopped! Yet why have I so found
An instant feeling almost like dismay?
Why note its silence so short than its sound?
For it has ticked all day.

So may a life beside my own go on,
And such companionship unheeded keep;
Companionship scarce recognized till gone,
And lost in sudden sleep.

And so the blessings Heaven daily grants
Are in their very commonness forgot;
We little heed what answers our wants—
Until it answers not.

A strangeness falleth on familiar ways,
As if some pulse were gone beyond recall—
Something unthought of, linked with all our days—
Some clock has stopped—that's all.

—George H. Coomer, in Youth's Companion.

TORNADOES, HAILSTORMS AND WATERSPOUTS.

At this season of the year, when storms of limited area and great violence are apt to occur, we are equally apt to suffer from outbreaks of new paper meteorology which are sometimes almost as appalling as the phenomena they attempt to explain. We may be excused, therefore, for assuming that the subject is one of popular interest, and for compiling some of the more significant and certain results of observation and scientific deduction with regard to the origin, conditions and behavior of this class of storms.

A favorable opportunity for doing this is furnished by the recent publication of the tenth appendix to the report of the Superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey for 1878, containing the second part of Mr. William Ferrel's researches on cyclones, tornadoes and waterspouts, in which the theory of cyclones is mathematically discussed at great length, with a comparison of the results thus obtained with the facts of observation. We may safely draw from this treatise such information as may seem of interest to landmen at this time, with reasonable confidence that we shall not be misled with respect either to facts or inferences. Although largely similar to cyclones and governed by the same general principles, tornadoes form a distinct class of meteoric phenomena. The initial temperature conditions which give rise to cyclones generally extend over large areas. The conditions of tornadoes depend rather upon vertical relations of temperature, under which the unstable equilibrium of the atmosphere is liable to be violently disturbed by slight local changes of temperature causing the under strata of air to burst up through the overlying strata. A cyclone is usually a broad, flat, gyrating disk of atmosphere, very many times greater in width than in altitude; a tornado may be regarded as a column of gyrating air in which the altitude is several times greater than its diameter. The enormous velocities of the ascending currents in a tornado appear to be caused by the differences between the gyratory velocities above and those very near the earth's surface. The former largely prevent the air from pressing in to fill up the partial vacuum near the center, while the smaller gyratory velocities near the earth allow it to rush in there to supply the draught. The tendency of friction is constantly to use up the energy of gyration so that the tornado cannot continue very long. The ascending currents carry up an enormous amount of aqueous vapor into the upper regions of the air, where it is condensed and produces the heavy rains observed in connection with tornadoes. An ascending current of sixty meters a second, which cannot be unusual in tornadoes, would furnish, under extreme conditions of air saturation, four inches of rain a mile, if it were to fall directly back. With such an ascending velocity, however, no rain could so fall. It would be thrown outside the vortex, giving an immense though lighter fall of rain over a larger area, especially if the tornado in its irregular progressive motions should remain stationary or nearly so for several minutes. If the velocity of the ascending current is not so great that the water is all carried up where the currents are outward from the vortex, and yet great enough to prevent its falling back, there may be in the lower part of the cloud a vast accumulation of rain, prevented from falling by the ascending currents and from being dispersed by the infowing currents from all sides toward the vortex. When the sustaining energy of the tornado is exhausted by friction or by the weight of water accumulated in the cloud, the water is liable to fall in masses, causing what is called a cloud burst. This is especially liable to occur in mountainous regions, for contact with a mountain mass greatly interferes with the gyratory motion of the tornado and the infowing currents below, and tend to break up the system at once and let the whole cloud burst suddenly.

The water in cloud bursts is generally poured down. Long before the ascending currents are reduced so as to allow the water to fall in drops it seems to collect at certain places and force its way in a solid stream down through the ascending air. Having once made an outlet for itself the water is necessarily accelerated in velocity, so that before reaching the earth the stream may be pouring with irresistible force, cutting, when it strikes, the sharply marked and often deep channels left by cloud bursts, especially on hill-sides.

When the ascending current carries the vapor into the region of frost—which is at a lower altitude within the gyrating funnel than outside of it—the condensed vapor is converted into hail. The small hailstones may then be kept suspended near the base of the snow cloud and enlarged by additions of freezing rain. In this way compact homogeneous hailstones of ordinary size are formed. At the height of 7,000 yards the air has lost more than half its density, yet an ascending velocity of twenty yards a second, which must be no unusual one in tornadoes, would sustain even at that altitude hailstones of considerable size. It is not necessary that the hailstones should remain in the freezing region a long time, or remain stationary. They may be carried from this vortex out where the ascending current is small, and dropping down some distance, may be carried into the vortex by infowing currents and again thrown up to the region of frost. The nucleus of large hailstones is usually compacted snow. A small ball of snow saturated with rain is carried higher and frozen; and being of less specific gravity, the compact ball is kept where it receives a thick coating of ice from the unfrozen water dashed against it, and afterwards falls to the earth, either at a distance from the vortex where the ascending currents are weak, or near it after the uprush has been sufficiently exhausted. Sometimes, as in the case of the cloud burst, an almost incredible amount of accumulated hail may fall in a short time, when the energy of the system is suddenly spent.

The formation of large hailstones by concentric layers of clear ice and white snow, laid on like coats of an onion, will be readily understood from the foregoing. As many as thirteen layers have been observed in large hailstones, showing that they must have made half a dozen circuits, being successively thrown out of the frosty vortex above and sucked in below by the infowing currents, each time adding to their coating of snow and ice before their final fall to earth.

When the tornado is very small in the area covered by the gyratory motion, a land spout or a water spout is formed, as it may happen to occur on land or at sea. In these the gyratory velocity rapidly diminishes with distance from the center. Their destructive effects are sudden and often great; but the area of violence is small. In the center of a waterspout, as in that of a tornado when in full force, no rain falls or water descends in any form, though a heavy shower often falls in the vicinity. On land dust and light substances are carried up, and as they are being collected from all sides by infowing currents toward the vortex below, they assume the form of a cone, which meets the descending spout, falling apparently from the clouds, and thus give the whole phenomenon the appearance of an hour-glass.

The observed diameter of waterspouts range between two and two hundred feet or more, and their heights from thirty to fifteen hundred feet, sometimes very much more; but none of these observations can be regarded as at all exact. With a high temperature and a very low dew point Mr. Ferrel calculates that a water spout might reach a mile in height, but such conditions must occur rarely. Water spouts are often observed to drop down from a cloud in an incredibly short space of time, and to be drawn up again in the same manner, but this is all an illusion. When the gyrations are such as to not quite reduce the tension and temperature in the center, so as to condense the aqueous vapor and make it visible, a very slight increase at once reduces the temperature sufficiently, and the spout appears from top to bottom almost instantaneously. Just the reverse of this takes place, when the spout breaks, and it seems to be drawn up instantly; it is dissolved, not lifted. Tornadoes and waterspouts originate only in an unstable state of equilibrium of the air, which requires an unusually rapid decrease of temperature with increase of altitude. This can take place only when the strata nearest the earth are unusually heated; accordingly they never occur at night or in the winter, and but rarely in cloudy weather. If any agitation of the air, such as that arising from the discharge of cannon, tends to break up these nebulosities, it also tends to break up the disturbance of the air from any cause must tend to prevent their formation. Hence they occur at sea and on the lakes only when there is little or no wind.

White squalls are invisible spouts. In such cases the dew point is so low, and the cloud when formed so high, that the gyrations are invisible. Still the gyrations and the rapidly ascending current in the central part are there, and also the rising and the boiling of the sea. Over the boiling sea, high up in the air, is a patch of white cloud, formed by the condensation of the vapor when it reaches the required height. The bulls-eye squalls on the west coast of Africa are of precisely the same nature. In these cases the air is too dry to furnish the cloud necessary to make the spout, or center of the gyratory movement, visible.

In hot, dry climates these ascending whirls of air form and spouts or pillars of sand. Both water spouts and sand spouts are hollow.—Scientific American.

His Modesty.

The other night a policeman observed a man hanging around the entrance to a Michigan Avenue hall in a queer sort of way, and he asked him if he belonged to the order then in session up stairs. The man replied that he did, and the officer inquired:

"Then why don't you go up?"

"Well, I was thinking of it."

"Haven't been expelled, have you?"

"Oh, no."

"Aren't afraid of anybody?"

"No."

"And you haven't lost your interest?"

"I might as well tell you," said the man after beating around awhile longer.

"I went down to Toledo a few days ago, and somehow the story came back here that I was drowned. My lodge thereupon passed resolutions to the effect that I was honest, upright and liberal, and a shining ornament, and that what was its loss was my gain. I wasn't drowned, as you see; but I kind o' hate to walk in on 'em and bust those resolutions. I've tried it three times, and I can't get higher up than the fifth stair before I weaken."—Detroit Free Press.

Dangers of Mouth-Breathing.

Dr. Clinton Wagner lectured last night before the New York County Medical Society, at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, upon "Habitual Mouth-Breathing." "Only two words," said the lecturer, "have ever been written on this subject. Its importance is not generally understood. Breathing through the mouth often affects the constitution seriously, and a person who is habitually addicted to it can easily be distinguished by the silly and idiotic expression of his face. Indulgence in this habit affects the hearing, and the nose is apt to become permanently closed. It also produces chronic inflammation of the windpipe and the upper part of the throat, and it alters the character of a person's voice. It also causes asthma, curvature of the spine and what is known as pigeon-breast. The Indiana mothers teach their children to breathe through the nose, and to this must be attributed partly their freedom from these diseases and their excellent health. A nose-breather," the speaker added, "never snores."—N. Y. Tribune.

In the village of Salem, near Springfield, Ill., there is the old case of instruments which Lincoln used when he was Deputy Surveyor. In the old days when the boys were out surveying they had little contests in which each boy tried to make the highest mark on a tree with an ax. Lincoln's marks were the highest, and several trees now show them. A chalk mark made by Lincoln on a floor, to show the meridian, is still there.
